AGE: 20 yrs SEX: M DATE OF COLLECTION: 13/12/23 DATE OF REPORTING: 19/12/23

INTERPRETATION:

Suggestive of Normal Study

- 1.Hb-HPLC is a screening test. Genetic studies are essential for confirmation of diagnosis.
- 2.HPLC report should be correlated with history, physical findings and others ancillary investigation.
- 3.Recent onset blood transfusion altered the HPLC report.
- 4.HPLC fractions include glycosylated Hb and other non specific Hb fractions which are not relevant in analyzing; thus% analysis may not add up 100%.Please refer to HPLC graph for a full analysis.
- 5.The value of HbA2 may be decreased in associated iron deficiency anemia, thus masking a beta thalassaemia trait, in case clinical suspicion indicates a haemoglobinopathy, a repeat estimation of HbA2 after correction of iron deficiency may helping getting a correct diagnosis.
- 6.Mild cases of  $\alpha$  thalassaemia trait(type1&type2) are generally not detected by Hb-HPLC.
- 7.Genetic studies shall be required for confirmation of mutation status.
- 8.Family tree study(screening) including study of parents or siblings may sometime required for proper evaluations.
- 9.Patient identity not confirmed.
